Eligibility for the sliding fee discount program is based on your family size and household income.

What would I need to bring to apply?

You will simply provide the number of individuals in your household, and proof of any income earned by those individuals. (This could be a tax return, one month's worth of check stubs.) Proof of any retirement, SSI, unemployment income, or child support should also be provided, if applicable.

How long is the sliding fee discount program good for?

Based on this information, if you qualify, your eligibility is good for 12 months, after which you would simply re-apply again using updated family size and income information. You can continue to re-apply every 12 months so long as your family size and income fall within the eligibility requirements.
